AL-ANDALUS ENSEMBLE

“A delightful proposition of exquisite music” -El Pais, Madrid, Spain
 Winners of the Peoples Grammy Award for “Best World Music Song of 2009” JPFolks

Led by oudist Tarik Banzi, the Al-Andalus Ensemble is internationally known for exploring a creative fusion that etches a fine line between the exquisite and raw, the passionate and powerful. Listeners enjoy a confluence of the best of the East and West while the ensemble’s sophisticated artists soulfully merge classical, jazz and contemporary music with musical traditions from the Middle East, North Africa and Europe. Al-Andalus’s repertoire and artistic philosophy embodies a new sonic vision embracing our global cultural heritage.

Charting new terrain with Grammy-winning violinist, Charlie Bisharat, this contemporary World-chamber trio of oud, violin and guitar gracefully moves between the classical and the modern. By subtly interweaving tradition and sophisticated innovation to create an intricate musical tapestry that they perform with freshness and originality, Al-Andalus Ensemble has earned a devoted international audience. For festival settings, the Al-Andalus Ensemble expands with additions of modern Andalusian dance as well as trumpet, vocals, piano, bass and drums for a vital, energetic and absolutely beautiful experience!

“Unique, deeply moving music--a development as fruitful as Astor Piazzolla’s when he shocked the Argentinean establishment with his “Nuevo Tango”
 -Ted Gioia, author “History of Jazz”

The core of the Al-Andalus Ensemble is the married couple Tarik and Julia Banzi, who make their home in both Morocco and the USA. Their lives reflect their commitment to creating peaceful understanding between the East and the West. Inspired by the Renaissance, they are scholars, musicians and artists whose lives reflect a commitment to create peaceful understanding between the East and the West. They present historically informed performances of Andalusian works and also create new compositions that are rooted in the Andalusian legacy.

The Al-Andalus Ensemble takes its name from a medieval story of peace: Between 711 and 1492, Spain witnessed the cultural synthesis of Africa, the East and the West, and of Muslims, Jews and Christians. The era and region in which these groups so peacefully co-existed is known as “Al Andalus.” An outstanding model of tolerance and multiculturalism, Al-Andalus produced remarkable artistic, scientific and cultural enlightenments that set the stage for the European Renaissance. The music, song and dance that inform the Al-Andalus Ensemble’s repertoire serve as artifacts of this peaceful society, acting as outstanding examples for the resolution of modern-day conflicts and challenges. The Al-Andalus Ensemble draws creative impetus from the rebirth of Al-Andalus in today’s cultural landscape.

The Al-Andalus Ensemble pursues a singular artistic vision which reminds us that the intricate interplay of diverse voices is the geography of cultural harmony. Far from the scholarly approach of Early Music or the traditionalism of much World Music, this collaboration generates a dynamic, new hybrid: a contemporary World-chamber ensemble that skillfully creates new and original music, retaining the essential soul and spirit of its Arab, North African and European heritage.

“Sounds simultaneously foreign and familiar, different styles working so beautifully together!” -The National; Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates

JULIA BANZI (Ph.D) (Guitarist, Ethnomusicologist) The world of guitar boasts few women who ignite the sound of the guitar, and in the flamenco culture, even fewer still. Julia lived in Spain for over a decade, where she specialized in flamenco and established herself as one of the very few female flamenco guitarists worldwide. In Andalusia, and later at Madrid’s Amor de Dios studios, Julia worked accompanying notable dance instructors such as Ciro, La Tate & Manolete and studied with some of Spain’s finest guitarists including Manolo Sanlucar, Isidro Muñoz, David Serva, Felipe Maya and Juan Maya “Marote.” Her passion for flamenco led her to explore its roots in an academic context, and she completed her doctorate in Ethnomusicology at the University of California, Santa Barbara. EMILY MILES (Voice) is one of Portland’s up-and-coming young singers. She grew up in Seattle, and later spent time living and studying in the Canary Islands, Cuba and the Dominican Republic. She graduated from Lewis & Clark College where she completed research on the Cuban hip-hop movement and the music of the Farmworker Movement, two projects that deepened her understanding of music as a powerful tool of social change, organization and cultural dignity. Emily brings a distinctly North American element to the Al-Andalus Ensemble, adding American roots and blues influences to the group’s already multicultural repertoire.
